

Surry author, Heather Pindar, publishes debut picture book 'Strictly No Crocs'

Heather Pindar will publish her first picture book, Strictly No Crocs, with Maverick Arts Publishing 28th January 2016.

Strictly No Crocs is about three mischievous crocodiles aren't invited to Zebra's birthday party. They decide to sneak in and eat everyone up, but end up having a little bit too much fun!

It is a humorous tale celebrates the fun of making new friends and the power of friendship to bring people together.

After growing up in Yorkshire, Heather studied German at university, and then settled in London for many years. She recently moved with her partner David to live in Guildford where she can spend more time cycling and walking, and riding her cheeky grey horse, Finty. Heather has over twenty years' experience as a teacher; she currently works part time in a Primary School in South London.

She said: "I find the children's brilliant imaginations and love of stories are my biggest inspiration for writing picture books."

The book is illustrated by the very talented Susan Batori who has brought the croc's mischievousness to life in these fun and expressive illustrations.

Strictly No Crocs is available for pre-order now and will be released 28th January 2016.
